

framing antiracism

That is critically aware of the ways race impacts our lives.

That is rooted in a power analysis of white supremacy.

That is grounded in accountability to communities of color actively working to dismantle white supremacy.

That is sustained by intentionally cultivated practices and creative collaborations.

That acknowledges that race and racism operate alongside other oppressions.

That seeks the liberation of all living beings and the earth.

individual reflection

What speaks loudly to you?

What is exciting/challenging/intriguing for you in this exploration of antiracism?

What must be rethought /reconsidered for an institution to animate antiracism?
